The Hack Series, hosted by Hack Club

Never written code before? Build your first website this weekend at The Hack Series, a free workshop hosted in downtown San Francisco by Hack Club for absolute beginners.

Go here to register: https://series.hackclub.io

Contact email: series@hackclub.io

Cost: Free

Location: 1547 Mission St, San Francisco, CA 94103

We'll be running ten 10-15 person sessions this Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. Each session lasts 2.5 hours with a 30 minute break. Spots are limited and filling up, so if you're interested go to our website and sign up now! It's free.

What will you learn?

You'll leave the workshop with two things built:

- A personal website
- A website that calls and texts your phone

We'll also be providing you with a series of workshops to do in your free time that'll teach you the basics of game development.

How much do I need to know?

Zero, nil, none. We're designing the workshop for people who have never written code before.

The less you know about coding, the better (though if you do have some experience, we'd still love to have you!) :-).

Who are we?

Hack Club is a San Francisco-based nonprofit that brings coding clubs to high school around the globe. We are in 52 schools across 12 states and 5 countries. If you're interested in starting a club, apply at https://hackclub.io/apply.
